

Evidence-based Program Planning for Healthier Communities

Health programs are important to offer, but limited resources and time mean they aren't always easy to run. We can help with our 6-step process for running evidence-based health programs.

This beginner training for community-based organizations offers:

- In-person training
- Resources and tools
- Technical Assistance

The training can help you:

- Increase your program's impact
- Build upon your organization's expertise
- Write more competitive grant proposals

The training was developed by a team that includes community and faith leaders from Greater Boston and Greater Lawrence, and researchers and staff from the University of Massachusetts, Boston, and Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. We have been working since 2006 to help local organizations make the most of their health programs.

“PLANET MassCONNECT gives you the tools to identify successful evidence-based programs and get immediate access to important data...I utilize the website regularly to research evidence-based programs that might work in my community.”

Rev. Albert Whitaker, NE Regional Director of Community Health Strategies,
American Diabetes Association
